That's What Happens To States

The Ohio Legislature has lent itself to a pathetic demonstration of what happens to the states when Uncle Sam - Mister Big - moves in.

It has fumbled state sovereignty in extended unemployment compensation to cover the needs of jobless citizens during a period of prolonged high unemployment.

Instead of proving that it was able and willing to act on its own responsibility, it fooled around with its decision-making power until the federal government beat it to the punch.

The damage was done last week when the U.S. House of Representatives passed 392-30 a billion dollars' worth of emergency unemployment relief. That made anything the Ohio Legislature might do about extending unemployment relief an anticlimax too little, too late and too messed up to reflect any credit on Ohio government. The Senate will hold hearings this week. Federal funds will be flowing by April 1, in all probability RESPONSIBILITY for this foul-up falls on both parties. The Republican party blocked unemployment compensation extension last November, and the Democratic party blocked it this February and March.

Didoes like this stack the odds against saving state sovereignty.

When state politicians go into arm-waving rituals of making the other fellow look like a boob, a monster, or a little of each, they merely give Washington another chance to seem to be saving the day.

Congress can do anything - spend a billion or a million. It doesn't even need to have the money. It can write the entire cost on the cuff and send the cuff to the laundry. It can go into its classic act of keeping one ear to the ground and both feet off the ground, without even exciting suspicion that it may be in the throes of a spend-and-

Instead of having to pry its way into local sovereignty, it is like a burglar being invited to come through the door by a feeblewitted inmate who thinks a burglar's jimmy is a magic wand.

Extension of unemployment compensation by Congress is a flesh-creeping example, moreover, of the fatal consequences of letting Washington do everything.

State sovereignty, state pride and state responsibility are drying up and blowing away. Why strive and struggle when all the money is going to come from the big monev mines on the Potomac? Why fight giants when Mister Big will come running up with enough money to bury them alive?

WHAT HAS HAPPENED in the House of Representatives and is due to happen this week in the Senate on unemployment compensation will happen eventually on every issue, if that's what the states want.

Why struggle locally to raise money for schoolhouses, teachers' salaries, aid for kids who can't afford to pay for their own education and help for colleges that have run out of cheese to pare? Mister Big will be glad to take over and do the whole thing. Mister Big, in fact, can hardly wait.

A Notable Lack Of Cheering

A one-tenth of 1 per cent drop in the consumer price index in January has caused no more cheering than the dismal news from the Congo. Yet, according to the shrieks of some of the Democratic canipaigners last year the salvation of the republic depended on a lower price index. It had gone up more than 10 points since 1955.

What, then, finally forced it down? The official explanation is that the main factor was the worst winter weather in memory. Severe storms tied up commerce and caused merchants to drop prices on goods that people 'couldn't buy, in many instances, because they simply couldn't get

Low temperatures and icy gales hurt used-car business and string-halted new-car

In addition to bad weather, the economic climate turned too chilly for the nation's good. The recession, which had closed in during the political campaign, began to leave its mark in January.

The question is whether there could have been a reduction in the price index without these blows of adversity. Organized labor especially likes to point to every rise in the price index as proof positive that it is being ground under the heel of the profit system and is entitled to redress. Labor spokesmen pointed to increases during the Eisenhower administration as reason for driving its disciples into outer darkness.

Yet there isn't a cheer to be heard anywhere now that the index has dropped a notch and may drop a few more notches before it rises again.

The great illusion of the Era of Doctored Statistics dies hard-that prices should remain stationary while wages move ever upward. The fact is that when the price index falls, the country has no more reason to be happy than when it rises too rapidly. But it always moves up or down. Not even a statistican can make it remain should be put on the board of directors. A New York court has ruled 4-3 grand juries must either indict or keep mouths shut. As dissenting judge says, this would deprive such juries of a power and duty held for 300 years. News of grand jury activities often brought needed exposure and reforms, whether or not anybody got indicted. Maybe non-indictments showed up scandalous evils as often as indictments. The excitement concerns the knowledge the Mohole might produce.

The Antarctic Continent, which lies almost entirely within the Antarctic Circle, has an area of nearly six million square miles equal to the United States and Europe combined. Nine-tenths of it is covered by an ice sheet thousands of feet thick in places. About two million square miles have been seen by man, but only a small region has actually been explored.

Where The Assembly Bills Stand

By Duane E. Croft

So much attention has been fo- universities' branch college procused on the jobless pay battle in the Ohio General Assembly in the last couple of weeks that it may seem to some citizens the legislators have nothing else to do.

That of course, is not the case. The total of bills intriduced has passed the 1,000 mark and the lawmakers still have two legislative weeks to prepare their pet proposals before the House drops the lid on its hopper.

Historical precedent says only about a quarter of the bills introduced will be recorded eventually in the state's statute books. And only a relative handful of those that make the grade will arouse the earth-shaking interest.

THE LEGISLATIVE mill is a tortuous process, even for the socalled noncontroversial measures. Witness, for instance, the fate of the jobless pay bill despite the fact that practically every legislator is in favor of an emergency extender.

Consequently, a measure that stirs political animosities or threatens to step on the toes of nominate as ambassador to Japanese who themselves particisome special interest is more Japan, to replace Douglas Mac- pated in the riots and later redisinterested committee's files schauer. Never is this more true than when an aggressive governor and the legislative majority are lined up on opposite sides of the political fence, as in 1961. That's when the governmental theory of checks and balances is likely to evolve into a simple checkmate.

DESPITE the prospect of a gloomy future, however, several battle-baiting proposals have been put on the bumpy Assembly belt. This is where some of them stand at the moment:

The bill to give local governments $14 million more a year for street and road use by shifting the costs of the Department of Highway Safety from license plate fees to gasoline tax revenue is scheduled for a floor vote in the House during the coming week.

It still faces hearings and a vote in the Senate and, after that, the possibility of a gubernatorial veto. Gov. Michael V. DiSalle's proposed measure against criminal conspiracies has been sent to the House Judiciary Committee but hasn't been given a hearing yet.

DiSalle's highly controversial demand for new laws against conflicts of interest among public officials is being batted around by a subcommittee. The three-man group promises a sincere effort to come up with something workable, but they all concede it won't

The four bills suggesting ways to redistrict the state to provide for Ohio's 24th congressman in 1963 are also in subcommittee. No one has been very optimistic that anything will come of them. Three constitutional amendments calling for annual sessions of the Assembly have been offered, but none of them has had a hearing. The two in the House have not even been given to a committee.

SEVERAL BILLS on municipal annexation are in the hopper, and at least one has had one hearing. But the major annexation proposal is awaiting its turn on the schedule of the Metropolitan Areas Committee in the House. A bill to authorize the creation of public community junior colleges will be introduced this week. It is the result of work by the Interim Commission on Education Beyond the High School, but spokesmen for the six state universities and Gov. DiSalle him- situations.

The House bill to abolish the Department of Industrial and Economic Development has been given three hearings. The Government Operations Committee may take a vote on it Tuesday night. Chances are the department will be allowed to survive but will be told by the Finance Committee to get along on less money than it asked for.

So is his message on campaign expenses, another priority item on the gubernatorial list. Boxes of data collected for it from all over the state were stacked in DiSalle's office last week.

A basic complicating factor in many of these measures is the fact they will cost more money. The Republican majority has pledged itself to keeping taxes right where they are, so money spent for new programs will have to be skimmed from old ones.

The unemployment compensation bill still has several hurdles to cross before its fate is decided. But when that is done, the legislators will still have plenty

Then he accepts this point of view of the Japanese "who participated in the demonstrations" by concluding that the American view of Communist inspiration was "mistaken."

This is hardly a judicial manner for an individual who is supposed to be qualified as an ambassador to draw a conclusion in so important a matter. Let's see what the opinion of the Japanese government was concerning the origins of the riots. Note, also, that that government took its case to the voters of Japan last November and received an overwhelming vote of confidence.

On a visit to Japan I spent hours with the security police of Japan and they told me, with clear evidence to support them, that through the radical political and labor elements in Japan, Peiping was pouring money into Japan to create just such demonstrations against the democratically elected government.

The inability of the security police to prevent the riots was due not to their lack of information concerning the causes but to the laws of Japan imposed under our occupation which rendered the police helpless in such henever a Hollywood movie studio needs birds to act, like doing tricks, playing dead, or just chirping a tune, it almost invariably turns to A. W. Kennard, a bird trainer who operates a Bird Wonderland at his home in Thousand Oaks, just north of Los Angeles.

Outside his home A. W. Kennard works with his cockatoo act. The birds are trained to ride a merry-go-round of sorts, work a teetertotter, pull a string to fire a cannon, and push a small cart.

Birdman A. W. Kennard and his prize bird, a trained cockatoo named "Corky." The bird is pure white with a touch of yellow on the underside of his wings and a beautiful chrome yellow comb.

Seated in hallway of home, Kennard lets different types of birds fly around and get used to him.

Kennard has been training birds for the stage, screen, TV and nightclubs for years. His feathered performers range from the tiny sparrow and canary to the more robust macaw and cockatoo.

At times, Kennard has to supply birds on short notice. For quick training he has converted a hallway of his home into a cage. There, with the doors shut and a small light burning, he sits for hours until the birds become thoroughly accustomed to him and learn to take his orders.

In one cage he keeps as many as 800 canaries. He'll sometimes get an order from a studio to furnish several hundred birds for a scene or several birds that are good singers.

An actor will often go to Kennard's place to get to know the birds with which he's going to perform. Burt Lancaster, one of Kennard's most recent visitors, was playing the part of a prisoner who catches and trains birds in his cell.

The biggest problem in training birds for the movies, Kennard declares, is to train the actors to relax with the birds. "You would be surprised," he says, "at the number of actors here who are scared stiff of a bird. They say the bird will peck the eyes out."

Kennard and wife Dorothy train a canary to walk a rope. Takes a lot of patience, he says.

He teaches a bird to lie on its back. Because of back's bone structure, this is difficult trick for bird.

Two trained linnets find perch on fingers of actor Burt Lancaster and trainer Kennard. Birds will act in new film with Lancaster who has part of prisoner who catches and trains birds in cell.

Wood Panels Help Broaden 'Small' Room

PORTLAND, Ore. - How do yo get decorative interest into a space tight bedroom which is barely large enough to hold the bed and

Obviously, when space limits the amount and type of furniture that can be used in a room, decorative impact must come from the room's basic elements - its walls, floor and ceiling.

For the floor, carpenting of a gay, clear color that enlivens the room is needed. The ceiling must be made to soar away from the walls, visually extending space upwards, and walls should contribute texture to eliminate the constricted, cube-like appearance which so often exists in a small bedroom. Tough as the assignment might sound, it is really quite easy to accomplish. For example, choosing wood paneling for bedroom walls is always a sure bet. Natural wood's rich coloring and its handsome grain can be counted on to inject a note of pure elegance that will transform the pint-sized cubicle into a luxurious boudoir.

Many exquisite types of wood paneling are available, and each has its merits. For the tiny bedroom, a light hued, delicately grained wood such as west coast hemlock would be ideal.

Hemlock's subtle coloring, which is about the shade of sparkling golden champagne, will contribute heady richness that is, at the same time, neutral enough to permit wide latitude in choice of color for carpenting, draperies, and bedspreads.

Chile Communists Win Seats In New Election

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)-Communists won their first Senate seats in 14 years but conservative government candidates in Chile's congressional election held a comfortable lead today.

Partial returns gave parties backing President Jorge Alessan dri's coalition government 299,762 votes and leftist and Communist parties 258,572. The Communists elected at least three senators, causing dancing and shouts of 'victory, victory" on the street in front of party headquarters. The election was Chile's first chance to react at the polls to Alessandri's austerity program. In the municipal elections last year the Communists and Socialists had made a poor showing, and the shift in strength Sunday surprised political observers.
